

The UH Co-Lab

Where a community comes together to create a space

Project Contributors: Madelaine Britt, Colleen Carew, Lauren Martinek, Beth Mercer
Project Mentors: Dr. Barbara Bono, Darren Cotton, Aaron Krolikowski, Joe Kurtz, Dylan Steed

Who are we?

The UH Co-Lab, thanks to the support of the St. Joe's Housing Initiative, will be offering 20 workshops a year, in addition to its other classes, solely focused on home improvement and care. Whether it is a 101 class on fixing a leaky faucet, or a seminar on tenant rights and landlord responsibilities, students and district members will be able to take advantage of beginner-level courses offered in their own community, for their community, by community members.

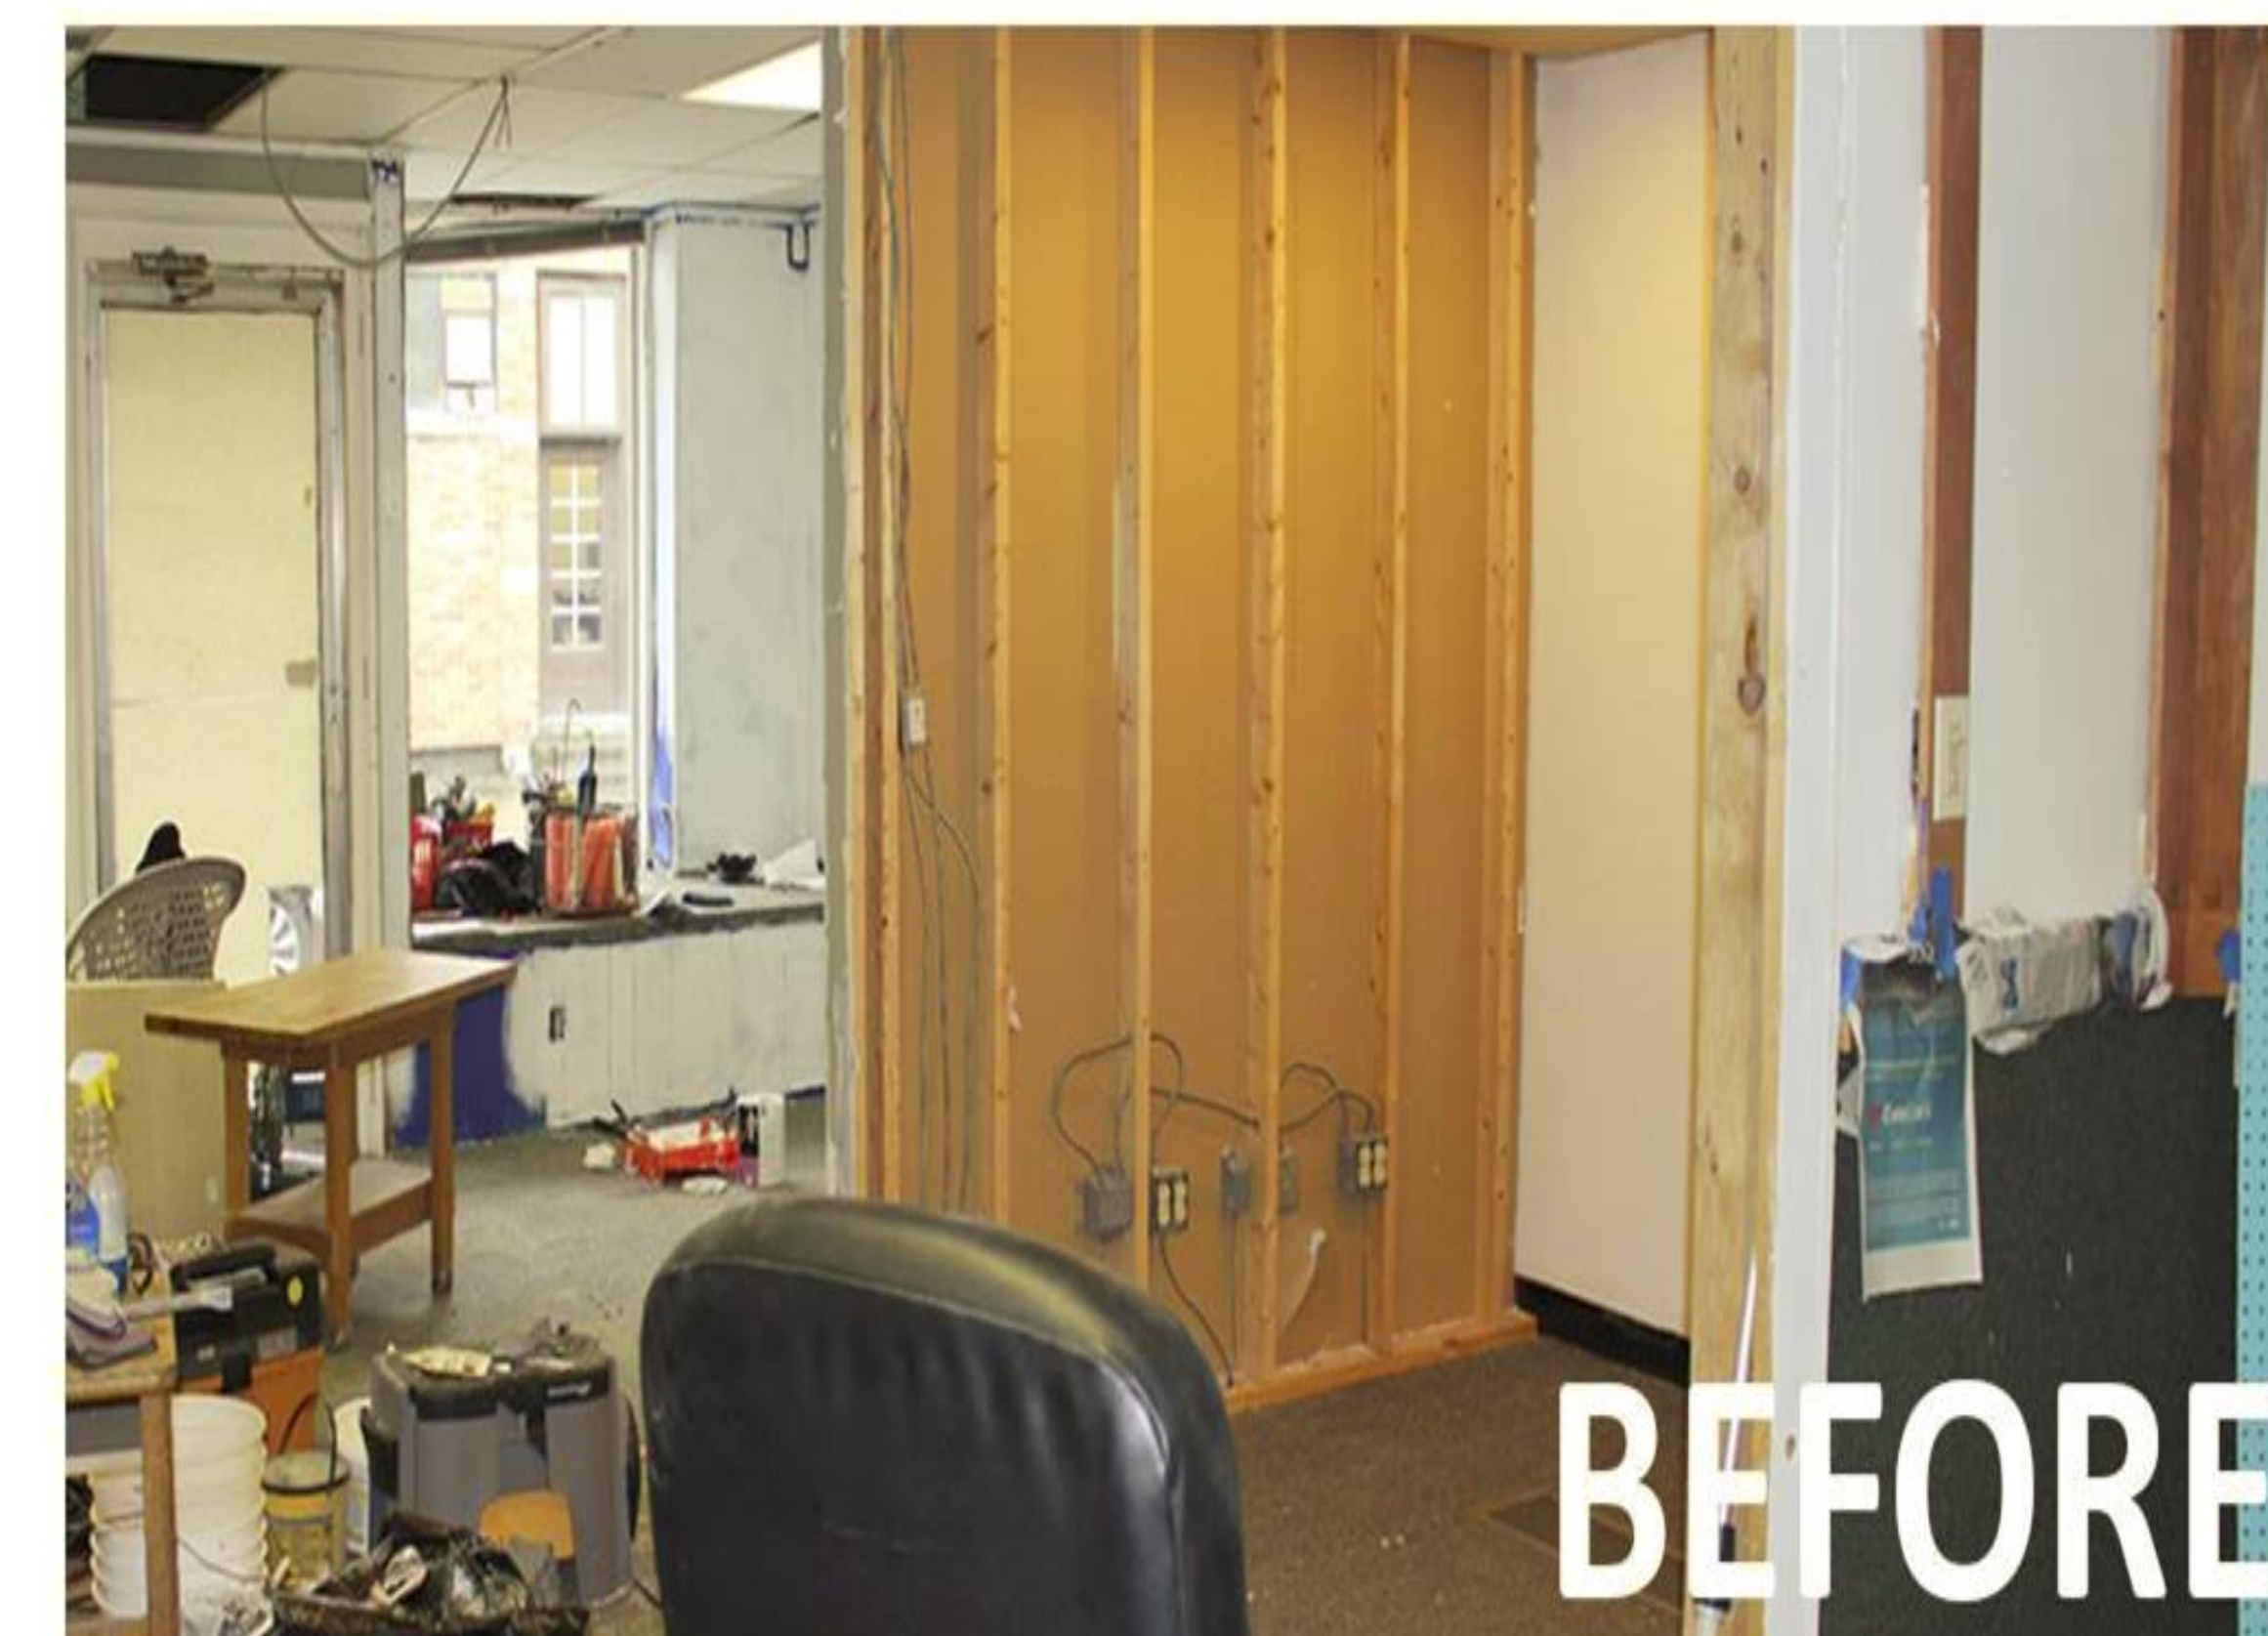

When it's not being used to teach Intro to Sign Language, woodworking, or as a pop-up art gallery for students or freelance artists, the Co-Lab is a free and open space for group work and collaboration during the operating hours of the University Heights Tool Library.

UH Neighborhood Problems:

- Absentee landlords
- Lack of student citizen engagement
- Failing infrastructure
- Transient residents

Community Partners:

- HOME (Housing Opportunities Made Equal)
- University Heights Tool Library
- PUSH (People United for Sustainable Housing)
- The Center for Urban Studies
- University Heights Collaborative
- St. Joseph Neighborhood Housing Initiative

Class Schedule Example:

Monday	Tuesday	Wednesday	Thursday	Friday
Community Gardening	Tools 101	Woodworking Wednesdays	Housing Rights Training	Tools for Tots
